TESTING FOR AN INSTRUCTION PERMIT

The following examinations must be passed before an instruction permit can be issued:

1. KNOWLEDGE EXAM -- This examination requires you to answer questions about driving rules, regulations, and laws. (The examination will be given orally upon request.) To prepare for the examination, please study the Virginia driver's manual.
2. PRE-SKILLS EXAM -- As a passenger in a DMV vehicle, you will be asked by the license examiner to identify objects through your bioptic and your carrier lens while the vehicle is moving and stationary.

If you pass these examinations, you will be issued an instruction permit at that time.

TESTING FOR A DRIVER'S LICENSE

You must first pass the KNOWLEDGE and PRE-SKILLS examinations described above. If you have already done so and have a valid instruction permit, you will not have to retake these examinations.

The final test required is the ROAD SKILLS examination that will be conducted by the license examiner. You will provide the vehicle in which to be examined. The license examiner will ride as a passenger in the car and tell you where to drive and what driving maneuvers to perform. The examination will last about 30 minutes.

If you pass the examination(s), you will be issued a driver's license at that time.
